

Bob Barker in hot water again!

BOB BARKER is facing his TENTH lawsuit!

The latest suit – by longtime “Price Is Right” staffer Debbie Curling – names Barker, CBS and Fremantle Media, which owns the game show, and a former producer.

“It’s a complaint detailing emotional abuse and sexual harassment on the set during Bob Barker’s 15-year reign of terror as one of the show’s executive producers,” attorney Nick Alden – who represents Curling – told The ENQUIRER.

“The basis of the claim is that in 15 years, at least seven lawsuits – all filed by women – were filed for discrimination ranging from sexual harassment to racial discrimination.

“CBS knew what was happening because their own news division reported on the lawsuits. But when Debbie complained about what happened to her, CBS said they could not substantiate the allegation.”

In fact, CBS settled one suit, filed by former “Price Is Right” model Holly Hallstrom for millions of dollars, said

Alden, who represented Hallstrom.

“The other lawsuits were settled for hundreds of thousands of dollars each – and it’s outrageous that CBS said they didn’t know about it,” Alden added.

One “Price Is Right” staffer who successfully sued Barker told The ENQUIRER

that CBS executives were aware of Curling’s suit and that “pretty much everyone at the show believes that CBS forced him out because they knew the suit was coming. They’re tired of the bad publicity.”
