

AFTER the dramatic police standoff at her home, Britney Spears languished all alone in her hospital room – because she’s feuding with her family.

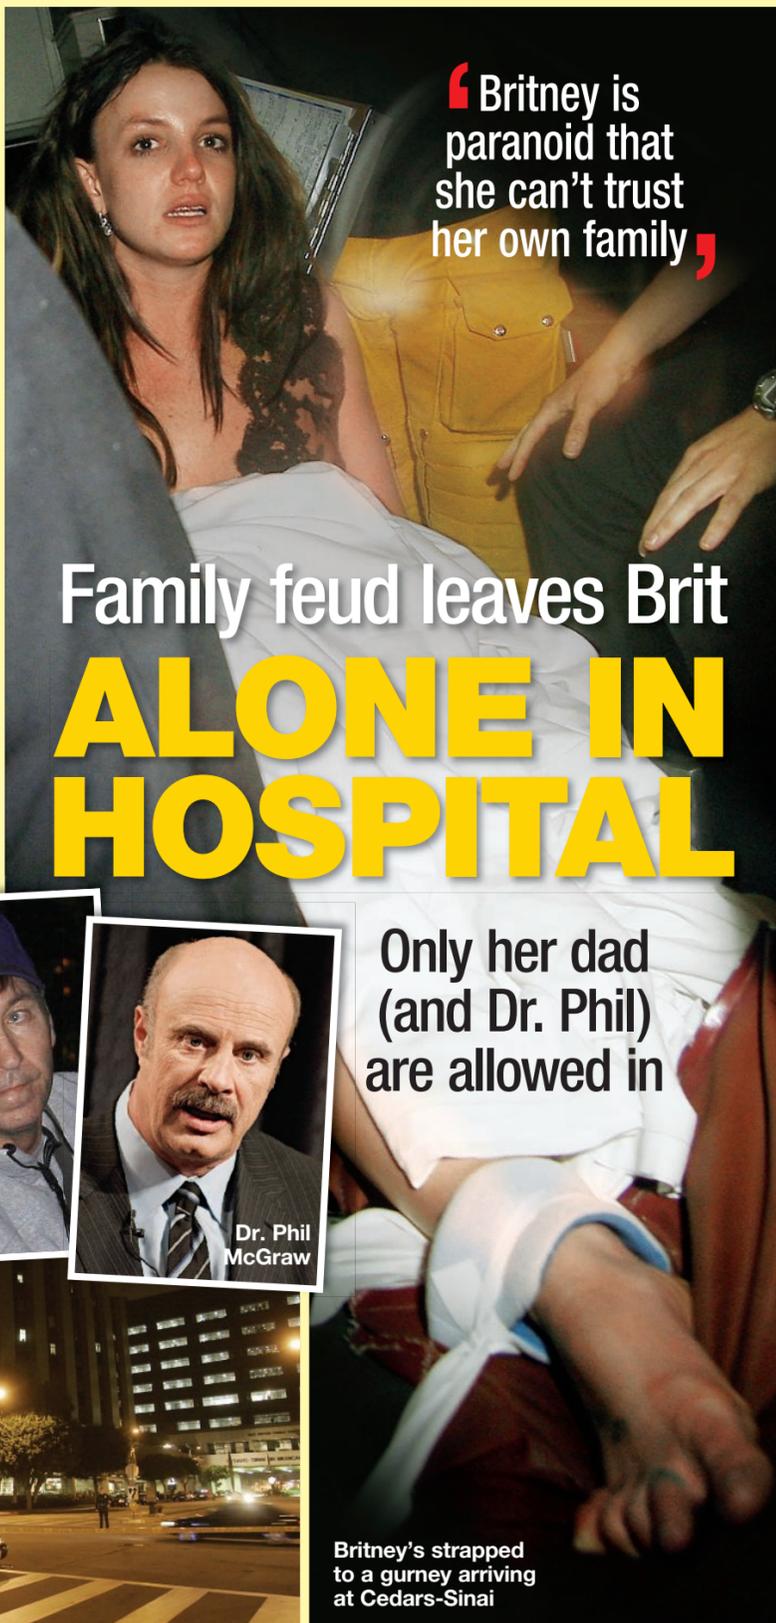

The troubled star remains estranged from her mother Lynne and resents her pregnant younger sister Jamie Lynn for not telling her she was pregnant, according to insiders.

In the end, 26-year-old Britney agreed to see only her father Jamie, sources revealed.

“Britney is really angry with Lynne and Jamie Lynn. She refused to see or talk to either one of them,” an insider revealed.

“Britney said she hates them both. She’s still very angry about Jamie Lynn’s pregnancy and upset because she was left out of everything. She hates all the attention Jamie Lynn has gotten.”

WHEN BRITNEY WAS hospitalized, Lynne stayed in Louisiana with 16-year-old Jamie Lynn. Instead of flying to Britney’s side, she asked celebrity psychologist Dr. Phil McGraw to intercede with Britney on her behalf, sources say. That move created headlines, controversy and even more

Britney is paranoid that she can’t trust her own family,

Family feud leaves Brit ALONE IN HOSPITAL

Only her dad (and Dr. Phil) are allowed in Britney’s strapped to a gurney arriving at Cedars-Sinai bad feelings from Britney toward her mother. Dr. Phil arrived at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles on Saturday morning, Jan. 5, just as Britney was preparing to leave, said a close source.

THE TV SHRINK TOLD Britney that all her family members – her mother, her father, her sister and her brother Bryan – want to see her get the help she needs. He even offered to bring help to her, said the source.

Dr. Phil followed Britney outside where her father was waiting to take her home, the source revealed.

“Britney refused Dr. Phil’s offer of help.”

Dr. Phil later came under fire by other psychological professionals for insinuating himself in the situation without Britney’s invitation.

Britney’s feud with her mother dates to last February when Lynne promised to take care of Britney’s two young sons if she went into rehab. Instead, Lynne gave the boys to Britney’s then-husband Kevin Federline, said the source.

Britney also feels her mother schemed with Kevin to keep her in rehab by hinting the couple might reconcile if she stayed there, said the source.

Lynne also threw her support behind Kevin in the custody battle – and then agreed to write a book on celebrity parenting that Britney feared would portray her in a bad light, said the source.

“Britney is paranoid that she can’t trust her own family. She feels constantly betrayed by them, especially her mother,” said the source.

Back in Louisiana, Lynne was having a tough time coping with Britney’s latest setback, the insider told THE ENQUIRER.

“Lynne used to feel that her life was like a fairy tale,” said the insider. “Now it’s worse than she could have ever imagined.”

by ALAN SMITH and ALAN BUTTERFIELD

Shocking details of BRITNEY’S BIZARRE BEHAVIOR in the ER

AHYSTERICAL Britney Spears began babbling in strange voices and taking on bizarre personalities as she was wheeled into Los Angeles’ Cedars-Sinai emergency room.

“She was screaming and yelling nonsense in various voices,” revealed an insider.

“Britney was jabbering on and on in a little girl’s voice, and then switched to a southern accent, and then a British accent. She was completely out of touch with reality.”

It was a surreal scene, with desperate staff, police and security guards trying to restrain and calm one of the world’s most famous stars as she flailed and fought and came completely apart in front of their horrified eyes.

The ENQUIRER interviewed eyewitnesses to get all the shocking details of the star’s horrendous meltdown – which ended with Britney being served with a restraining order to stay away from her own children.

Hoping to calm her, hospital staffers initially let the singer cuddle her baby Jayden, but Britney went ballistic when they tried to take him away, according to the source.

“I want my baby back!” the singer shouted in a thick southern accent.

Then she inexplicably switched to a British accent and said: “I need to go to the loo. I need to make sure I still look beautiful.”

IT REQUIRED POLICE AND HOSPITAL security to get her into an examining room and wrestle her onto a bed. Then nurses restrained both her arms and legs with leather straps, according to the source.

“Britney’s eyes were dilated, and her mouth was so dry it was difficult for her to talk clearly.” Britney had taken methamphetamine. The drug – whose medical uses include treatment of narcolepsy, attention deficit disorder and obesity – gives users a short yet intense rush, followed by increased activity and loss of appetite.

“When Britney was told her father Jamie was at the hospital, she shouted: ‘My dad? He’s unworthy to be my father!’” disclosed the source.

“She suddenly became calm and started talking in a little girl’s voice. ‘I don’t like this game. I’m not going to play anymore,’ she said.”

After being given a sedative,

Little Jayden James is taken to the hospital at the same time as his mother she calmed down. But soon the performer was bowled over by a huge shockwave.

The mother of two was served with a restraining order barring her from going within 100 feet of her sons.

“When Britney was handed the document,” says the source, “she blurted: ‘I don’t have to sign anything! I’m Britney Spears!...I’m Britney, and I can do what I want!’”

The following day, “Britney was dancing around her room,” revealed the source. “And she was speaking in a British accent.”

Two days after her admittance to the hospital, Britney insisted on being released.

“She left with a big smile on her face,” said the source. “It was as if she was checking out of a hotel.”

by ROBIN MIZRAHI