

BRITNEY TO KEVIN: THE PARTY'S OVER!

PREGNANT pop star Britney Spears ran hubby Kevin Federline and his party posse out of their Malibu mansion recently because the rowdy bunch was whooping it up until the morning as Britney and little Sean Preston were trying to sleep. After making his performing debut at the Teen Choice Awards on Aug. 20, Kevin was so pleased with himself he headed out to a club with an entourage in tow - to celebrate. Britney, who's due with her second child, No. 2 this month, went to bed to rest, said an insider. "The party didn't end at the club. At around 4 a.m., Kevin had about 20 partiers - including some scantily clad girls - back to their Malibu mansion. They were romping around, drinking, playing music, being rambunctious and throwing each other - fully clothed - into the pool," revealed the insider.

BIG NIGHT: Kevin hangs out with Coolio and a fan after the Teen Choice Awards

"They were so noisy they woke up Britney, baby Sean Preston, and even Kevin's mother Julie Blake, who was there helping take care of the baby.

"All the patio lights were on and Kevin was showing off all his backyard toys, including a big-screen retractable TV and the outdoor bar. "Britney tolerated the noise for a while, but when the revelers were still going strong at 6 a.m., she decided enough was enough.

"Britney came out to the patio and shouted: 'I want everybody out NOW!'"

Said the insider: "Britney just wanted Kevin's friends to go, but Kevin was so angry at her, he left in a huff with everyone else."

Kevin was so angry at her, he left in a huff

Britney isn't the cash cow she once was

By ROBIN MIZRAHI

BRITNEY SPEARS and husband Kevin Federline keep a high profile, but insiders say the couple's earning power is sinking fast.

Five years ago, Britney was ranked No. 1 on Forbes' Celebrity power list and earned $39.2 million - but last year the 24-year-old pop star's income was reportedly an estimated $4 million.

And it doesn't look like aspiring rapper Kevin will be raking in the dough with his new CD, due out in October. His recent performance at the Teen Choice Awards was universally panned. "All of Britney's hype for Kevin's single 'Lose Control' couldn't help his pitiful and embarrassing performance," a showbiz source told The ENQUIRER.

"After 30 seconds on stage, people were actually giggling at him."

Brit's career is on hold as she takes care of son Sean Preston, who turns 1 on Sept. 14, and awaits the birth of her second child in just a few weeks.

And although Britney's far from broke - with a net worth of more than $100 million - insiders said she'll never again be the hot commodity who earned huge sums of money in the past.

"There are too many up-and-coming younger stars," explained the source. "Britney had her big chance - and she did great with it - but her day has come and gone.

"As for Kevin - Britney gave him all the exposure an aspiring rapper could want. But he bombed."

NO SUPPORT: Kevin can't bring the money Britney once did