

DIXIE CHICK & HUSBAND CHEATED ON EACH OTHER

THE family that strays together, pays together!

Just ask Dixie Chick Emily Robison. She was dumped by her husband – because both were cheating on each other, say sources.

Last week, The ENQUIRER reported that the 36-year-old performer finalized her divorce from singer/guitarist Charlie Robison after nine years and three children.

Now insiders reveal Charlie was the one who ended the marriage – after learning Emily had fallen in love with her sound engineer, Marty Strayer.

"In 2005, the Dixie Chicks were living in Los Angeles recording their album 'Taking the Long Way,' and Charlie visited Emily maybe twice," revealed an insider. "And when her twins Henry and Julianna were born, he came for a day and went back to Texas.

Chicks went on tour and Emily and Charlie were again apart for months at a time – and that's when Emily fell for Marty.

"Emily would get two-bedroom suites – one for the twins, her older son Gus and the nanny, and the other for Marty and her. They made no effort to keep it a secret."

When the tour was over, said the insider, Emily and Marty continued to see each other.

Meanwhile, Charlie "was messing around with other women on the road and not even trying to be discreet," according to the insider.

When a friend tipped off Emily to Charlie's alleged extracurricular activities, the insider says she replied: "I don't care who Charlie is with, because I have Marty!"

When Charlie finally realized Emily was in love with Marty, he decided it was time for a legal split, divulged the insider.

"Everyone was surprised their marriage lasted as long as it did. They're trying to be friends for the kids – but they both moved on a long time ago."
