Jen's PLASTIC SURGERY DISASTER

She's furious about her new nose

JENNIFER ANISTON'S nose is really out of joint!
The "Friends" star is fuming over the results of her recent nose job because she thinks the tip is still too large.

The 38-year-old beauty first had a rhinoplasty 12 years ago – and then had her nose fine-tuned again in January.
"But Jennifer thinks it's still wide," an insider told The ENQUIRER.
"She feels she had the same problem years ago when she first had her nose done, and she remains unsatisfied with her look the second time around."

ACCORDING TO HER PUBLICIST: "Jennifer had a procedure done to correct a deviated septum that was incorrectly done" on Jan. 20.

"It's the best thing I ever did," she told a reporter. "I slept like a baby for the first time in years."

A fresh sea of publicity ensued, and "after" surgery photos got rave reviews for the stunning "Friends" star. But despite the fanfare, Jennifer still was not pleased with the results.

"Her doctor is telling her to be patient and wait at least six months for the swelling to go completely down before she judges it."

Los Angeles plastic surgeon Dr. Richard Ellenbogen, a nasal specialist who did not treat the actress, told The ENQUIRER: "At this point, Jennifer has three options: She can wait for the swelling to go down further, go to another surgeon who specializes in nasal revisions, or leave it as it is even if she isn't completely happy with it."

Dr. Jean Cirillo, a New York-based psychologist, thinks that Jen's insecurity over her looks may have another root.

Jen's mom Nancy Aniston

"Jennifer grew up with a hypercritical mother, who constantly intimated that she isn't pretty enough," Dr. Cirillo, who has not treated the actress, told The ENQUIRER.

Her mom Nancy harped on Jen's looks, and in an interview last year, the star confessed: "You got to the point where you felt like the ugliest duck on the planet."
