

The grand jury asked probing questions about Patsy and her relationship with husband John. Hoffman-Pugh says JonBenet's mom once admitted: "I don't like having sex with him"

rare occasions, maybe five times in the 14 months I worked there."

Patsy often asked her housekeeper for advice on how to save her crumbling marriage, once telling her, "Linda, I don't really like having sex with John." Hoffman-Pugh suggested renting an adult movie or seeing a doctor.

"But Patsy was always so moody," she adds. "She could be kind, but she had a quick temper and could snap and suddenly blow up in anger.

"Patsy and I were very close. I liked her very much and she was very good to me. My feelings for her made it hard for me to realize that she's the one who murdered poor JonBenet."

The housekeeper was also quizzed by the grand jury about evidence she believes points a finger at the mother of the slain tot, who was discovered wrapped in a blanket in the basement.

"It's impossible that a stranger would get into the house and find the door to the basement," Hoffman-Pugh tells GLOBE. "I worked there for almost a year before I found it. It's ludicrous to think an intruder would.

"And he wouldn't know to get the blanket JonBenet was wrapped in out of the dryer when there were lots of towels and blankets around that were easier to grab.

"As for the ransom note, that's definitely Patsy's handwriting. I recognize the A's and N's, and the accent she was always so careful to put over the E in JonBenet's name."

The ex-employee says she is sure John knows that his wife killed JonBenet, "But he's covering up for her to save his reputation."

The Ramseys' lawyer L. Lin Wood claims Hoffman-Pugh's testimony is false, adding that her "ignorance is overshadowed only by her imagination."

But the housekeeper insists she knows Patsy is guilty and is surprised she has not been indicted.

"I can only guess at exactly what happened the night JonBenet died," Hoffman-Pugh tells GLOBE. "Patsy got mad at her for something she did and snapped. I was sure there'd be an indictment against Patsy."

"JonBenet was brutally killed by her mother for no good reason. I know it, friends know it and the police know it. It's so sad that JonBenet's murderer might never be brought to justice."
