WEDDING SCORCHERS

- BRIDE FAINTED
- CASTMATES SNUBBED
- GUESTS SWELTERED

KATE WALSH'S fairy tale Labor Day wedding was marked by scorching temperatures, a giant snub to a few of her former castmates, and the bride fainting!

"Grey's Anatomy" stars Ellen Pompeo and Patrick Dempsey and former star Isaiah Washington weren't invited to the event.

"Kate never got along with the three of them," a source close to the actress told The ENQUIRER.

The 39-year-old actress — now the lead in ABC's upcoming "Private Practice" — married 37-year-old movie producer Alex Young on Sept. 1. A lavish reception followed at the Ojai Valley Inn & Spa, a posh resort about two hours north of Los Angeles.

GUESTS INCLUDED "Grey's" co-stars Katherine Heigl, T.R. Knight, Sara Ramirez and Justin Chambers, as well as actress Kate Beckinsale and her husband, director Len Wiseman.

But the ultra-exclusive event was marred by a scorching, record breaking Southern California heat wave that caused Kate to faint.

"She had to be taken aside and revived. But a few minutes later she was fine," said the source. "They exchanged vows, and right away Kate seemed good as new."

The 120-person dream wedding nearly dissolved in a sea of perspiration when the thermometer reached 113 degrees.

"Then, at the reception, just when it seemed it couldn't get any hotter, the electricity shut off — the lights went out and the air conditioning went dead," another wedding guest revealed.

Despite the unbearable

Katherine Heigl, Sara Ramirez and T.R. Knight were hot. Isaiah Washington, Patrick Dempsey and Ellen Pompeo were not heat, guests seemed to enjoy the celebration as they sipped ice water and held lavender towels on their foreheads to stay cool.
