

Kirsten Dunst

BACK ON BOOZE — IN A BIG WAY

The actress hit L.A. nightspot The Room on Sept. 4

HOLLYWOOD wild child Kirsten Dunst is once again taking the party scene by storm — and she recently got so loaded that frightened friends had to drag her out of an L.A. club.

The 26-year-old “Spider-Man” star drank herself into a stupor on vodka cocktails at the underground nightspot The Room on Sept. 4, say eyewitnesses.

Just months ago in February, Kirsten had checked into Utah’s Cirque Lodge rehab. She insists she was being treated for depression, not drugs or alcohol.

But pals fear Kirsten’s drinking is spiraling out of control, and claim that at least once a week she visits The Room, where she gets “drunk out of her mind.”

KIRSTEN WAS AT THE CLUB WITH two friends — a man and a woman — and kept drinking until she was staggering, a source revealed to The ENQUIRER.

“Kirsten got so smashed she began stumbling around the bar, slurring her words, and tried to hook up with a random guy she met. She sat down for about a half hour and began hanging all over him and running her hand along his knee. “The guy eventually began to look like he was disgusted by her — but she was so out of it she didn’t even realize he wasn’t interested.

“When Kirsten’s friends tried to spare her further embarrassment and drag her away, she got belligerent and started ranting, ‘Leave me alone! I’m having fun. What is wrong with you? I don’t want to leave!’

“Finally, a pal convinced her they should leave, and her friends took each of her arms and helped her out of the bar.”

The actress was “a mess” when she left the club, divulged an insider.

When she parties at The Room, said the source, “Kirsten usually tries to disguise herself by not wearing makeup and pinning her hair up on her head.

“Kirsten’s drinking really seems to be out of control. Hopefully she’ll get a handle on it before it’s too late.”
