Staff rejoices as Lindsay leaves after year of torture

HELL

Wild child:

Party girl Lindsay liked to cavort to all hours of the morning, with guests often spilling out of her rooms and into the hallways.

Munchies:

Lindsay demanded someone bring a microwave to her room at 4 a.m. – so she could heat up her Lean Cuisine meal.

FOR more than a year, a tantrum-tossing Lindsay Lohan turned a famous Los Angeles hotel into a house of horrors – and now that she's finally left, the staff is ecstatic.

The 20-year-old despot in a dress registered under "Lily Flowers" – dubbed "The Little Bitch" by employees – was so outrageously demanding that some people at theateau Marmont reportedly did they could to get her to leave...and they succeeded.

Lindsay was occupying four rooms, and when she returned from a European trip at the end of October, she was downsized to only one, a source close to the hotel security team told The ENQUIRER.

"She threw a fit but was told there were no more available rooms. 'Fine, I'll just move out!' she yelled, and the management quickly agreed she should.

"LINDSAY CALLED THE CONCIERGE at all hours of the night – sometimes just to talk – but usually because she wanted something from room service.

"If she couldn't get it immediately, she'd hang up and call right back, either pleading or threatening, and when she was still told no, she'd march out to the front desk and throw a tantrum, screaming and stomping her feet.

"Sometimes, when she was told the kitchen was closed, she threatened to call the police. It didn't even make sense – but that's Lindsay, she can be totally bizarre.

"Once, at 4 a.m., she wanted a microwave oven to prepare her Lean Cuisine. Another time she was demanding risotto balls after the kitchen was closed, and started screaming, 'I want risotto balls! I want risotto balls!'"

The actress knew how to make a real ash out of herself, said the source.

"Lindsay smokes two or three packs a day and she freaked out when the hotel ran out of her cigarette brand. She demanded someone
