

Rise and shine:
Actor James Franco got a rude awakening from Lindsay when she simply let herself into his room early one morning.

Up in smoke:
When the hotel ran out of her favorite brand of cigarettes, "Lily Flowers" insisted someone run out and get her more.

go out to buy some."

Lindsay began her stay in one room, but collected so much stuff - mostly freebie accessories and clothes sent by stylists and publicists - that she turned her room into storage and reserved another, according to the source.

Before long, she was occupying four rooms - which resembled an upscale yard sale.

"Lindsay's rooms were so filled with clothes and junk that room service couldn't even clean them," said the source.

The wild child often partied all night - with guests spilling into the hallway, said the source. "This type of behavior is a nightmare to hotel security."

Once, Lindsay managed to get key to actor James Franco's room and let herself in at 5 a.m., according to the source.

"James was sleeping and I woke him up - he was furious. He immediately called the front desk screaming and demanding to know how Lindsay got into his room. The hotel changed the lock on his door.

"The Chateau Marmont's security team is relieved to see Lindsay - and so is the staff. She sucked the time and energy of 10 employees and was extremely obnoxious."
