

Lindsay begging pals to smuggle drugs into rehab

A DEFIANT Lindsay Lohan is not taking rehab seriously – even begging friends to smuggle in sleeping pills, charge sources.

The drug-and-booze-plagued actress recently entered Malibu's Promises clinic for a 30-day stint – but is more concerned about her upcoming 21st birthday bash in Las Vegas than recovery, say insiders.

"Lindsay managed to keep her Blackberry and is texting her friends – begging them for sleeping pills," a close pal told The ENQUIRER. The pal believes "she's just playing at getting sober."

"She's in rehab because of her addiction to drugs – everything from cocaine to OxyContin to the sleeping pill Ambien."

Lindsay, 20, is complaining she can't sleep, but friends, who realize how serious her condition is, are refusing to cooperate, said the pal.

And Lindsay has been extremely difficult to deal with inside the rehab facility.

"SHE WAS SUPPOSED TO SHARE quarters, but she insisted on having her own private room," said the pal.

"And while group therapy is a huge part of substance-abuse recovery, Lindsay went only once and then refused to return."

During that one session, the Hollywood horror child reportedly spent most of her time blasting her so-called friends – including
