

Keith Urban and Nicole

COUNTRY music superstar Keith Urban has begged Nicole Kidman to give him another chance after calling off their wedding. He's not only committed to tying the knot but to sweeten the pot, he's promised never to do drugs again - even if it means weekly urine tests.

That's the latest shocking development in the on-again/off-again wedding of the glamorous Aussie couple.

Keith's renewed commitment has prompted the ultra-discreet Nicole to publicly announce the couple's engagement. "He's actually my fiancé," she recently admitted at a gala she hosted for the United Nations Development Fund for Women in New York. "The wedding is on, but it's one day at a time," said an insider. "There's no date set because he's determined to beat his drug demons before they walk down the aisle.

"Keith's so devoted to Nicole that he's even promised to take weekly urine tests to stay on the straight and narrow for her."

It's a real turnaround for the singer, who battled drug and alcohol addiction up through 2001.

As The ENQUIRER reported May 8, Keith backed off previous wedding plans because he didn't think he could commit to the Oscar-winning actress properly. "Keith just didn't feel he was ready for such a big responsibility so soon into his recovery - he's always fearing a relapse," revealed the insider.

"But recently, he's gotten more of a handle on his addictions with the help of his sobriety coach, and he feels he can be the husband Nicole deserves. That means he'll even take drug tests to show his devotion to her."

Although the couple, both 38, has been secretly engaged since last November, they've been quiet about the specifics of their relationship until now.

"Nicole has finally moved past Tom Cruise and is thrilled that Keith has come around and demonstrated his loyalty and commitment to her," said the insider.

"She's finally secure enough that she can announce her engagement.

"Now if she can just get a handle on a wedding date!"
