DIVORCE-CRAZY Hollywood producer Robert Evans is headed back to divorce court - for the seventh time! Bob, whose Academy Award-winning films include the classics "Chinatown," "Rosemary's Baby" and "Love Story," has been served with divorce papers by current wife Lady Victoria White after just 11 months of marriage.

The couple apparently won't have to adjust their lifestyles much as a result of the split because they never moved in together after they were married. "Bob and Victoria were neighbors when they met - they live two houses away from each other - and that didn't change after they married," a source close to the couple confided to The ENQUIRER.

"Bob likes to work at home writing all day, and would then go to Victoria's in the evening for dinner and to spend the night. She felt she was always waiting around and wondering when Bob was going to show up.

"Victoria also has three children under 10, and it didn't suit Bob's lifestyle to live with them."

This was the third marriage for Lady Victoria, 43. Bob, 76, has been married to actresses Sharon Huguely, Camilla Sparo, Ali MacGraw and Catherine Oxenberg, as well as former Miss America Phyllis George and model Leslie Ann Woodward.

"When Bob and Victoria first married, she thought she could adjust to the bizarre separate homes arrangement, but after a while, it got to her," explained the close source.

Victoria filed for divorce in L.A.

Superior Court on Friday, June 16, citing "irreconcilable differences."

"Bob only learned about it when he was served," said the source. "He was confused, upset and angry. Victoria has been crying over the split, too."

"They got along great as friends, but just couldn't make it as a married couple."
